CONTENTS

Acknowledgements xi
List of Abbreviations xiii
Timeline: MAY 1916 TO JANUARY 1925 xiv

Introduction 3

1 Well-Prepared Ground
The British Left on the Eve of the Russian Revolution 17
The Main Constituents of the British Left 17 • Radical Plebeian Democracy in British Socialism 21 • Shop Stewards, Syndicalism, and Guild Socialism 29 • De Leonism and the Socialist Labour Party 34

2 Initial Responses to the Russian Revolution
The British Left in 1917 and the Leeds “Soviet” Convention 41
The “Marvellous Revolution” 41 • The Origins of the Leeds Convention: Anticipations and Preparations 45 • The Convention Meets 49 • The “Soviet” Resolution 51 • Reactions to Leeds 55 • Trying to Make British Soviets Work 58

3 The Bolsheviks and the British Left
The October Revolution and the Suppression of the Constituent Assembly 67
The “Unknown” Bolsheviks Begin to Register 67 • The Bolsheviks Take Power 72 • How the British Left Reacted to the October Revolution 73 • The Crucial Turning Point: The Suppression of the Constituent Assembly 76 • The Suppression of the Assembly: Immediate Reactions 80 • The Labour Party Conferences of 1918: Litvinov Versus Kerensky 88 • Snowden’s Early Optimism 91 • “Replacing” the Constituent Assembly: Retrospective Justifications 92
4 The Myth Established
   The Positive View of Soviet Democracy 99
   “The Superiority of the Soviet” 99  •  The Reality of Soviets — as Seen by Supporters and Sympathetic Observers 107  •  Labour Leader and “an Experiment Which Mankind Truly Needs” 114  •  Allowing the Bolsheviks a “Run for Their Money”: The New Statesman, 1918–1921 116

5 Polarized Social-Democrats
   Denunciation and Debate 125
   The National Socialist Party, Justice, and the “Anti-Bolshevik Campaign” 125  •  Parliamentarism and Trade Unionism: The 1919 Debate in The Call 135

6 Equivocal Reformists
   The Independent Labour Party, the Guild Socialists, and the Reaction to Kautsky 147
   ILP Critics: Giving the Bolsheviks Some Benefit of the Doubt 147  •  Conflicts in the National Guilds League 153  •  The “Aunt Sally of the Third International” 162

7 The Dictatorship of the Proletariat 169
   The Dictatorship of the Proletariat and Soviet Democracy 169  •  The Temporary Nature of the Dictatorship 177  •  The Revolutionary Party and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat 179  •  Defenders of Dictatorship 183

8 The Independent Labour Party and the Third International
   A Crucial Test for Belief in Soviet Democracy 189
   Which International? 189  •  Third International Support in the ILP in Early 1920 194  •  The 1920 ILP Conference 198  •  Reports from Russia 200  •  The Left Wing of the ILP and the 1921 Conference 205

9 “An Infantile Disorder”
   Communist Unity and the Brief Life of the Communist Party (British Section of the Third International) 215
   The Khaki Election of 1918 215  •  Waiting for the Soviets: The “True Believers” of the Workers’ Socialist Federation 217  •  “Left” and “Right” Communists 220  •  The “Leading English Communist” 222  •  “A Wrecking Policy” and the Failure of the “Appeal to Caesar” 227  •  “Left-Wing” Communism: Wary Shop Stewards Remain Aloof 229  •  Gorter Rejects Lenin’s Criticism 231  •  The Short but Eventful Life of the CP (BSTI) 233