Acknowledgments

This project was supported financially by the Arts and Humanities Research Council, the John Fell Fund at the University of Oxford, the University of Aberdeen, the Rozsa Foundation, TransCanada, the Alberta Museums Association, the Foundation for Canadian Studies in the UK, the Glenbow Museum, and the Galt Museum and Archives.

We are especially grateful to partners and colleagues from the Siksika, Piikani, Kainai and Blackfeet Nations: Allan Pard and Charlene Wolfe; Shirlee Crowshoe; Delia Cross Child; Frank and Sylvia Weasel Head; Andy Blackwater; Narcisse Blood and Alvine Mountain Horse; Rob First Charger; Martin and Pam Heavy Head; Verdun Hind Bull–Morning Owl; Herman Yellow Old Woman; Clarence Wolfleg; Kent Ayoungman; Earl Old Person; John and Carol Murray; Lea Whitford; Mari King; and Debbie Magee Sherer. Duane Mistaken Chief and Alvine Mountain Horse assisted with the Blackfoot translations and transcriptions used in this book. We also acknowledge the guidance provided over many years by members of the Mookaakin Cultural and Heritage Foundation. Louis Soop has encouraged us ever since he saw the shirts at the Pitt Rivers Museum in 2000. All of these and many other individuals—too many to name here—have been generous with their advice and have guided us through potential difficulties with the project, and we are very grateful to all for their assistance. We remember with respect those who made significant contributions to the Blackfoot Shirts Project who have now passed on, particularly Allan Pard, Frank Weasel Head, and Narcisse Blood.

At the Pitt Rivers Museum, we thank Dr. Michael O’Hanlon, director, who understood what we were trying to do, gave permission for a highly unusual project to go ahead, and supported us during difficult moments; Heather Richardson, head of conservation, whose personal and professional commitment to the project made it possible; Kate Jackson and Jeremy Uden, conservators, who also helped to clean the shirts before travel and reported many discoveries; Julia Nicholson, joint head of collections, who arranged the loan of the shirts to the Glenbow and Galt Museums; Malcolm Osman, photographer; and other PRM colleagues who participated in the project and its subsequent exhibition at PRM. We are grateful to Cathy Wright, museum administrator, and Antigone Thompson, finance officer, who carefully oversaw complex international grant finances. We would also like to thank the students and volunteers who contributed to cutting patterns for shirts, transcribing interviews, creating Tyvek duvets for shirt transport, tracing painted images, and assisting with the Oxford conference and this book. Photographs of the Blackfoot shirts were made by Malcolm Osman, with detailed images contributed by Heather Richardson, Jeremy Uden, Kate Jackson, and Laura Peers. All images of objects in the collections of the Pitt Rivers Museum are reproduced courtesy of the Pitt Rivers Museum, University of Oxford.
Acknowledgments

At the University of Aberdeen, we thank Michael Bumsted, who transcribed the majority of the interviews conducted as part of the project; Helen Skinner, of the Sir Duncan Rice Library, for her assistance with arranging inter-library loans of HBC records; Jill Strachan and Pam Thomson, who dealt with administrative matters; June Middleton and Tim Ingold, who read and commented extensively on drafts of the grant application; and Nancy Wachowich, Tanya Argounova-Low, and other colleagues in the Department of Anthropology.

At Glenbow Museum, Calgary, we remain grateful especially to Gerald Conaty, director of Indigenous Studies, who mentored the project from its inception and whose deep commitment to working with Blackfoot people has been an inspiration to us. His important contributions to this project before his untimely death in 2013 shaped the project and made it better in many ways. We thank also Glenbow staff members Daryl Betenia, who coordinated loan and logistical issues; Heather Dumka and the conservation team at Glenbow, who permitted us (and many Blackfoot people) to invade their working space for three weeks; and Kirsten Evenden, Melanie Kjorlien, Rebecca Melenka, Heather John, and the Glenbow technical services team, who facilitated the project in so many ways. Clarence Wolfleg, who was part of the education team at Glenbow during the project’s visit, very kindly assisted with many of the visits.

Thanks also to Emma Quinn, who did the graphic design for the exhibition and for the catalogue that accompanied it.
At the Galt Museum and Archives, Lethbridge, we thank Susan Burrows-Johnson, CEO and executive director; Wendy Aitkens, curator; Blanche Bruisedhead, Blackfoot interpreter; Kevin MacLean and Brad Brown; Beatrice Milner; and Anine Vonkeman. We would also like to thank Doran Degenstein, at Fort Whoop-Up National Historic Site, and Johnny and Mae of Johnny’s Restaurant in Fort Macleod.

The story of Paya’kskii is reprinted with permission from “Scarface,” told by Three Bears to David Duvall (The Papers of David Charles Duvall, 1877–1911, American Museum of Natural History, Division of Anthropology Archives, cat. no. D883).

Finally, and especially, warm thanks to our families, on both sides of the ocean, who tolerated our long absences and welcomed us home again, every time.